SENATOR SEWARD IN MINN ESOTA

Editorial Correspondence of the Sentinel.

ST. PAUL, Monday, Sept 17. The glories of the Upper Mississippi have been so often described in the columns of the SENTINGE, that I can add nothing to what has been so frequently and so well said on the subject. We were favored with good weather and a rising river, as we pursued our course northward, and the officers of the Milwaukes made us all feel at home on hoard of their fine and fast boat. At every land ing, there were crowds of people to great S-nator Sawage and testify their affectionate regard for the man, and their devoted attachment to the great principle which his public life has illustrated. These demonstrations reached their climax at Red Wing where some bandreds of enthusiastic Republicans had assembled to welcome their distinguished visitor from New York. As they would not be denied, Gov. SEWARD, Mr. PATTERSON went ashore and were escorted penalty, seven years in positentiary. DEMPby an eager crowd to the large hotel, hard by the landing, where two or three short speeches were made, which were received with rapturous applause. On leaving Red Wing, as on landing there, the thunder of cannon and the cheers of the multitudes, made the welkin ring. "Young America" responded to the salutes from the shore, and the steam whistle of the Milwauker sounded a shrill accompaniment.

I have never seen a finer sight than met our eyes as we crossed Lake Pepin, late in the afternoon. The black clouds of an approaching thunder-storm shrouded in deep gloom the high bluffs of the Wisconsin shore on our right, -while on the left the parting beams of the setting sun, lit up with variegated and brilliant lines, the obsquered western sky. The storm burst upon us just as we reached Lake City and we lay there until its fury was spent. In spite of the pouring rain, many came aboard the steamer to see and tion and courtesy from the officers.

Sunday was a day of rest for all of us and was quietly and thankfully enjoyed. Most of the party attended Divine service in the morning and evening at St. Paul's (Episcopal) Church, the Rev. A. B. PATERSON, Rector. It is a beautiful edifice and the con- augean stable of this corruptly administered gregation is large and steadily increasing. The Bishop of Rupert's Land officiated in the evening; the church being thronged with a very intelligent, attentive and devout audience. The fatigue of our journey disposed us to retire at an early hour, Sunday eve-

The sun rose in unclouded splendor, this morning, and there was every promise of a fair day. It was the more welcome, as our party were all intent on a drive to Fort of Baal to be slain, (politically), and the Snelling, the Falls of Minnehaha, Mineapolis and St. Anthony. By 9 c'clock, under partment of the Government.

peated cheers. He acknowledged the compliment and expressed his grateful thanks for the kindly greeting of the people in a few happy remarks. Mr. ADAMS and Gen. Nxg also spoke, briefly and well. Moving across the river to St. Anthony a similar ovation was extended to Senator Seward there; but as the rain, by this time, had commenced falling fast, it became necessary to curtail the ceremonies and hurry home. We got back to St. Paul in good season; having, notwithstanding the rain, greatly enjoyed the day and the drive. This evening the Wide Awakes have been out in full force, and made a call upon Squator Seward at the International Hotel, where most of the party are comfortably quartered.

To-morrow is the day appointed for the meeting and if the promise of the evening sky, of a fair day to-morrow, does not fall of fulfilment, there will be an immense gathering of the people of Minnesota to hear and welcome WILLIAM H. SEWARD. B. K.

Our County Committee.

EDITOR SENTIREL:-Let me call the at tention of our County Committee, appointed zome weeks since to the fact that only about six weeks remain before election, in which six weeks three months work ought to be done. There being a good many Democrats not adhering to the Douglas party, in this versal cry was " let us have our ancient concounty, there is no end of activity on the stitutional rights." Many speeches were part of the Committee. What documents have they circulated? What meetings held? What other steps taken beyond fixing a late day for the Convention? I have no dispotion to blame them, but they should be impressed with the truth that their function is to direct and labor in the county canvass with energy and wisdom. In the towns, particularly, frequent meetings should be held, for which speakers enough may be found in the city. Will our Committee take this friendly hint? A LINGOLE MAN. FORTY-SIME SWAYS, a present to August Balmost, from the Vintner's society of London, have been received and placed in Central Park, New York; and when the city of Comburg replaces the eight that have died,

Mr. Diokinson, of Chicago, made a f-w remarks on the propriety of teaching the gospel to infant minds. He thought the gospel was adapted to them. We should commence learning them while they are infants. I think our Sarior said somewhere the same of the contract of infants. I think our Sarior said some-thing about bringing little infants to him. I think that was what he said, he meant that at all events. Bring them before they are old enough to dee wrong. When they are old enough to love their mothers they are old enough to love the Savior. I believe the cross can be made attractive to children, and cross can be made attractive to children, and as soon as it is, they begin to love it. The hope of the world and this country is the children. And in the children the children the children the which is to turn the world right side up. seeing that a great sacrifice must be made, he attituents were the most numerous and most extend and perpetuate slavery.

His next effort was intended to show that the Republican Party was responsible for all grounds, and at each of these gates a nest Federal enactments-illustrating his argu ment by the resone of Boorn-and statements misrepresenting the position and principles of Judge Shoan. He then read an extraot from the Watertown Republican, charging him with having voted for a Know-Nothing. This so enraged him that he went into a tirade of personal abuse, calling the editor a liar, and of having maliciously misrepresented facts,-stated that both Gov. BASHYORD and Governor RANDALD, were members of the Know-Nothing Lodges in Milwaukee, -that he had been told so by good respectable men who had met with them, but when asked to give the names, Hatly refused. The whole speech, if it can be called a apeach, was characterized by low slang, falsehood and misrepresentations and very unsatisfactory to many of the most respectable and intelligent Democrats. It will not do for Republicans to allow such a leafer as LARRABER to disgrace and misrapresent the the Third District another term. Every effort should be made to redeem it from that party of which he is a fit representative.

Matters in Marquette County.

Correspondence of the Scating. Springereld, Marquette Co., Wis. Sept. 17, 1980. Eds. Sentimen: - There is an impression abroad concerning this portion of the State, which does injustice to its true character as a fertile and productive section, and the present season with its abundant harvest, here as well as elsewhere, would seem a fit knowingly, or without thought, or consideration, associate a sandy soil with barren. ness and sterility. Previous to becoming a resident of this section, I shared the common impression of its unproductiveness, and in respect to fruitfulness, regarded it as near kin to the Great Sahara. But comparing the results of the present year's farming with those of other portions of the State I have visited, completely revolutionizes my

Let facts speak in its favor. Besides the extravagant growth of the smaller productions, that are well known to be indigenous of grain is heavy. Wheat, which many have supposed impossible to grow here, turns out from twenty to forty bushels per acre. Corn, a product conceded to require a strong soil, is enormously eared, many stalks producing from three to six sound ears. Hye, of the best quality; and oats, barley, etc., yielding heavily. The yield of potatoes is truly surprising; planted on the sod of new breaking untouched by the ace or any other implement of cultivation, they surpass in quantiraised on the best prairie soil, and this, toe, upon land which in its primeval state grows nothing but scattering jack-caks, short and gnarly, and a sparse growth of undertrush, insufficient to hide the tuftless sand, A stranger rassing along, and judging from the appearance of the soil, might, without any violation of theoretic consistency, declare it wholly worthless; yet, in so doing, he would be guilty of misjudging; for in this instance Nature seems to have been deseived in the capacity of the soil, or at least injudicious in the selection of native products, as it proves much better fitted to the growth of productions of immediate necessity to man, than to wild, undomesticated plants.

Most persons are deceived in the quantity AM EXTRAORDINARY PLOT.—The letter from Triests, in the London Marning Star, of land the soil contains. Where a casual observer would pronounce it nearly a hun-

THE CROWDED STREET. BY W. C. BRYANT. Let me move slowly through the street, Filed with an ever shifting train, And the sound of steps that bent The murmuring walks like summer rain.

How fast the flitting figures come? The mild, the flerce, the story face; So bright with thoughless suites, and some Where secret tears have left their trace. They pass—to toil, to strife, it rest; To halls in which the least is spread; To chambers where the funeral guest, In silence sits beside the dead.

And some to happy homes repair Where children, pressing check to check, With mute caresses shall declare The tenderness they enmost speak. And some who walk in calinness here, Shall shudder as they reach the door Where one who made their dwelling dear, Its flower, its light, is seen no more. Youth, with pole cheek and slender frame And dreams of greatness in thine eyel Goest thou to build an early name, Or early in the task to die?

Keen son of trade, with eager brow, Who is now fluttering in thy snare? Thy golden fortunes, tower they now, Or melt the glittering spires in air? Who in this crowd to-night shall tread The dance till asplight gleams again? Who sorrow o'er the untimely dead? Who wreath in throes of mortal pain?

Some, famine struck, shall think how long The cold, dark hours, how slow the light And some who famot and the throng. Shall hide in dens of shame to-night.

They pass and herd each other not; There is who head; who holds them all in this large love and boundless thought. These struggling tides of life that seem for wayward, aimiess course to tend, Are eddies of the mighty stream. That rolls to its appointed end.

THE CHILD'S GIAT.

"Miss Conway, allow me to introduce Signor Carnavelli. Miss Conway has just returned from Paris," added Mrs. Mattison, aside, to Pedro; 'has been in Europe for five years. Educated there."

Pedro bowed to the young lady, and his artist's eye dwelt with delight upon her face. She was very fair, dazztingly so, with a faint, very faint color. Her hair was arranged in broad braided loops upon her nack, and a few brilliant scarlet flowers, with dark green leaves, were twined in the braids; round her face it fell in full, soft, golden curls. Her large, soft eyes were dark time, and the features were perfect as if carved from a classic status. CONCLUBED,

Pedro spoke to her in Italian. He longed to hear his own musical language syllabled by the perfect childlike mouth. Miss Con-way answered instantly in the same tongue, her.

"Tell me, Lizzie," he said, joining Mr.
Wayne, "who is the lady I was talking with." with."
"Miss Conway? Her father was quite wealthy at one time, when she was a little girl. They lived near us at Melross. When her mother died, he took her to Europe, to have her educated. About two years ago he died, leaving her without one cent. She remained in the school in Paris, as teacher, where the land once here manify and when Mrs. her last, I suspect.

"Oh, Mrs. Mattison may bring her out at her own parties, but it is not likely that any one else will invite a governess to theirs.

Pedro's studio in New York was quite the to it that the handsome Italian might trans to it that the handsome Italian might transfer their features to canvas, were the leaders of the ton. Amongst these were Mrs. Mattison and her daughter, a handsome brunette, of about seventeen. When Mrs. Mattison could not accompany her daughter, a slight, fair girl, in a dark brown merino, with a close cottage bonnet and thick veil, came with Miss Laura.

"Only Miss Conway, my governess, one of Ma's pets," Miss Mattheon told Pedro, and let her sit silently in a corner or near the window, whilst he painted.

Pedro accepted the introduction to "only Miss Conway" with his usual graceful low, but his eyes often wandered from the dark but his eyes often wandered from the dark beauty of his subject to the graceful figure near the window, though he did not address her more frequently than courtesy required. One afternoon, Pedro was sauntering along Broadway, with no particular object in view, when before him he saw the dark merino dress and close bonnet which had so often graced his studio. The wearer was replained along the said was indeed and Pades. walking slowly, as if wearied, and Pedro easily overtook her. She started at his salutation, but gracefully replied to it, smiling, as if his handsome, cheerful face were not unwelcome to her.

'You look weary,' said Pedro, in a gentle tone tone.

"I am very tired. I have been walking nearly four hours, trying to match a dress-trimming for Miss Laura"
"Have you found it?"

me for a few moments; there is a picture there I want to ask your opinion about. Oh,

"Walk into the Dusseldorf Gallery with I will not detain you long," as she hesitated.
"For a few moments, then."

The temptation was a strong one for the wearied governess, whose opportunities for seeing the works of art were few, and she allowed him to guide her across Broadway to the building. He chose a seat opposite the picture he said was the one he wished her to admire, and then said: and then said:

"Let me see the dress-trimming—you know artists have a quick eye for colors; perhaps I can tell you where to match it." She drew it from he; pocket and handed it to him.

"Wait here for me a ittle while," he said after a moment's sentiny of the elaborate trimming; and befor sh could answer, he was gone, dress-trimning and all. She wandered through the room, enjoying she wandered three gn the room, enjoying keenly every picture worthy of notice; not heading the lapse of time, till the gathering darkness warned her that it was getting very late. She looked at her watch. Seven o'clock! It was nearly three hours since Pedro had left her. She was wondering anxiously what to do, when he came in.

"See! is not the match perfect?"

And he held not be rettern and a piece of trimming.

"Oh, how kind, how very kind you are!"
said Miss Conway, taking the pattern.
"It will do, then?"
"Yes; but you have bought a whole piece;
I only wanted three yards."
"How shall we measure it? Can you guess? Take it home and cut off the three yards. You can bring the rest to me tomorrow, when Miss Laura comes to sit.
Don't forget. I- want it for my wife's wedding-dress."
And he lauebed.

And he laughed.
"Don't trim her wedding dress with green," said his companion laughing also "I must see you home now; it is quite dark. No objections, if you plesse. I kept you here till this late hour, and you must you here till this late hour, and you must submit to my escort."

It was a pleasant walk. To Carrie Conway, whose life had now few gimmes of sunshine, it was a pleasant era in a toilsome existence; and to Pedro it was pleasant to —pleasant to look at the fair, childlike face raised to his; pleasant to hear the pure Italian from so sweet a voice; pleasant to hear a young lady with some subject besides dress and the onera to converse upon dress and the opera to converse upon.
Carrie bore the fretful childings for her long absence quietly, and slipped away to her own room to rest after her long walk; to

A rivid blush mounted to her cheeks as she read the words and the long-forgotten incident came to her mind. Child as she had been, she re-called the weary hardy-gardy boy resting against the wall, and her own pitying inspelse to comfort the "pretty boy" She did not look up as she laid the coin again in Pedro's extended hand, and Laura only saw that Miss Conway had looked at a min and returned it. coin and returned it.
"Will you come, both of you, to my studio to marrow, to see my picture for the next exhibition," said Pedro, as he rose to take his leave.

The invitation was accepted, and the next morning the two ladies visited the studio.—

The picture was called "Charity," and Carrie Conway recognized the stone wall, the rie Conway recognized the stone wall, the steps, the trees, and, above all, the group of figures; the dark Italian boy, with his ragged yet picturesque dress, the little child dropping a piece of money into his extended palm, the nurse supporting the child's little figure; Carrie knew them all. Laura was looking at her own portrait, which hung upon the wall opposite, her back to Carrie.—Carrie was looking with tearful eyes at the picture, when a low, tender voice said:

"I have the Child's, Gift of Charity, 7st, beggar that I am, I covet a richer gift now. Can you guess it?"

She did not speak.

"Carrie, may I call you mine, my wife?"
She answered by placing her hand in his, and Laura turned and interrupted the tete-a-tete.
